Strikes and State Ownership
The situation in Great Britain offers ample evidence that the state operation of industry affords no assurance of freedom from labor disputes. This same evidence is offered nearer home in the case of the state-operated box factory at Prince Albert where the socialist Saskatchewan government is discovering that benevolence towards organized labor does not guarantee unruffled labor relations.

Indeed, the Prince Albert circumstances are strikingly similar to what socialist demagogues in the past have declared could only occur under private enterprise. The box factory management, appointed by the Saskatchewan government, dismissed two employees, one allegedly for gross inefficiency and the other for accepting other employment while on strike leave with pay. Their union, a C.I.O. affiliate, demanded their reinstatement. The management rejected the demand but offered conciliation. The men quit work. The management then dismissed all employees who had left their jobs and closed down the plant.

When such action is taken by a private corporation it is called by labor a "lock-out" but whether this word stoppage is technically a "lock-out" or a "walk-out" is beside the point which is that this state-owned and state-operated industry, snatched from private operation by drastic expropriation proceedings, has now under public operation completely closed down.

The employees, hired by the state and given working conditions and wages which the private owners maintained would prove profitable operation, have been fired by the state and production has stopped.

And that, of course, is the critical point. Whether the work stoppage is a "walk-out" or a "lock-out" and whether the management was justified or not in dismissing the men and whether or not the strike was legal or illegal, the single fact remains that production, which is the only source of wealth, has ceased in this industry and the socialist government of Saskatchewan has failed as lamentably in its effort to get along with labor as any private owner could have done.

What, then, did anyone gain by the socialist expropriation of this plant to state operation? The management is without a working plant. The workmen are without jobs. The public is without boxes.

Everybody has lost.

Britain Paid the Shot
To anyone who wonders why Britain should be in such a financial and economic plight, some of the following figures should be interesting:

The United Kingdom went into the war a creditor nation and came out of the war a debtor nation to the extent of $13,500,000,000.

The assumption of this debt was in the protection, not only of the British Isles, but of the whole democratic world. For more than a year, it will be remembered, Britain stood alone against the Nazi forces which threatened all of civilization.

Some of the details of this debt have an ironic flavor. For instance, about half of it was owed to India, Burma, Egypt and the rest of the Middle East—Britain's bill of costs for having helped to defend them.

Burma and India are being given their independence. British troops are being asked to leave Egypt.

Britain seems to have paid an inordinate share of the war shot without getting much in return but abuse.

Canada's National Library
The project of enlarging the parliamentary library in Ottawa, with its 600,000 volumes in a true national library, appears to have been shelved, it is reported from the capital.

One would think it should remain shelved until greater consideration is given to all phases of the matter.

The parliamentary library started out to be a library of reference for the use of members of the House of Commons. It has grown into a storehouse of the writings of the majority of the Canadian people, it has become a national library.

There is one serious objection, however, to the proposal to convert it actually into a national library and to provide adequate quarters for it in Ottawa. That objection is that the centralization of such a library in the East would place it beyond the reach and use of the majority of the Canadian people.

If the national library must be centralized, let it be centralized in a more central spot geographically.

But surely a real national library should have some facilities for wide circulation. In brief, provision could undoubtedly be made to keep the more valuable volumes moving throughout the chief cities of Canada.

Only an itinerant library would be truly national in a country of this vast size.

Life's Darkest Moments
The opening of the long-sealed Lincoln letters and documents in the library of Congress, kept from the public eye so long by the decision of the civil war president's son, Robert Todd Lincoln, has been preceded for years by speculation regarding their content.

Certainly they would throw new light on, or at least show new details about, one of the most decisive administrations in American history.

Its Place in the West
By H. Boyd
Enough information has now been gathered about the proposed dam on the South Saskatchewan river between Elbow and Outlook to indicate that it would bring very real benefits to a province which, as previously stated, stands most in need of water.

"I am sure all duck hunters would be pleased to co-operate with this," Mr. Watt said. The cutting of the bag in the U. S. from seven to four ducks a day means a solution.

Chapman Leads A's Over Yanks

Walker's Late Homer Halts Dodger Slump

NEW YORK, Aug. 3 (AP)—The National League's two-seed, Brooklyn Dodgers, halted their three-game losing streak last night but it took them 10 innings before they routed Boston Braves 4-2 in Boston. Dixie Walker, popular Dodger rightfielder, broke up the game by hitting a homer with one on in the extra frame off Bill Voiselle, who went the route for the Braves.

Little Vic Lombardi started for Brooklyn and was working with a 2-0 lead going into the sixth inning when the Braves drove him from the hill and tied the score at 2-2. Hugh Casey took over and went the rest of the way to gain his eighth win.

The victory enabled the Dodgers to retain a seven-game lead over the second place St. Louis Cardinals who trounced Chicago Cubs, 8-1, in a day encounter.

HOWIE POLLOCK scored 10 hits while his mates clubbed five Chicago hurlers for 17 including a homer, double and single by Stan Musial, defending circuit batting champion.

Chinamen Reds downed Pittsburgh Pirates, 7-4, in a night game with Eddie Lusk and a credit flourish featuring the triumph by belting two run homers.

In a night game, Philadelphia Athletics pounded out a 3-0 triumph over the American League's front-running New York Yankees.

LED BY SAM CHAPMAN, who batted in three runs and scored three on a triple and two singles, the Pesky A's clubbed out 14 hits with a five run fifth inning rally enabling them to win.

The defeat cut the Yanks' lead over the second place Boston Red Sox to 13 games. The Red Sox, along with the rest of the American League and the New York Giants and Philadelphia Phillies in the National, were idle.

Your Baby and Mine

By Mildred Meyer Eldred
Once your youngster begins to go to school he is certain to discover the virtues of having a pocketbook and some spending money. He sees other children buying at the drug store, the grocery store and he wants to do likewise.

That pocketbook is important. It makes this money easier to carry and it develops in the child a sense of ownership.

This is "his" pocketbook and what goes in it belongs to him. When he feels that way about his own possessions, he will come to feel the same about those of others. It is a right feeling, but one which prevents him missing another's property.

The parent must not make the mistake of denying him his allowance or taking it from him if he misbehaves. This money, however small it may be, is his allowance and should be given him week after week, no matter what his behavior. If he misbehaves and needs punishment, punish him, but not by appropriating his allowance.

His first consideration of money should be to learn to manage it. No one can manage a fluctuating sum. It must be the same each week or else the child cannot plan for it.

At first, there will be nothing but spending. That is why it is desirable to begin allowances when the child is old enough to understand the meaning of five cents and the spending out of his system. The sum grows too large.

If the parent has entire super-fives and if he wants to save to have more purchasing power, he must do it of his own accord.

Until the allowance is of a size which allows for division, the Sunday School money, the money for appreciable size purchases should be furnished by the parents. The first allowances are capable of giving the child exercise in handling money.

view of the allowance, the management is taken out of the child's hands and has little value. It is then only a matter of digital desire for a child to put one cent in this place and another some place else because the mother has some idea that part of the allowance must be saved, part spent, etc.

It can't be done with five cents and it needn't be done. It is the child who must learn the limitations of five cents and if he wants to save to have more purchasing power, he must do it of his own accord.

Bridge

By William McConney
With the war over the American Bridge League has returned to its original child welfare activity, the first bridge tournament in children.

Recently Mrs. Fred Hirsch of North West was a check for $100 from the National Mat Jong League, for the Children's Cancer Fund.

Mrs. Hirsch is becoming interested in duplicate bridge and competitive play.

At the first time not long ago at the Adirondack Tournament, her husband, who was her partner, gave her full credit for today's hand, and I think you will agree that she deserves it.

Mrs. Hirsch (East) won the opening hand lead in dummy with the king. Now most players made the mistake of leading a diamond to their own hand in order to take the spade finesse; but South ruffed ace of diamonds and led another heart, which North ruffed. A diamond came back and South got in another ruff.

Mrs. Hirsch saw that if she could avoid losing more than one spade and one heart trick, she could make her contract.

At trick two she led dummy's ace of spades, followed by another spade. South won this with the king and tried to cash the king of clubs; but Mrs. Hirsch ruffed, picked up the trump and spread the hand for the balance of the tricks, making 11-0.

DOROTHY DIX says:

Bliss Assured If Wife Steers Course

A bride asks me to plead for her a few of the dangers that every young wife must consider in marriage so that she can steer a safe course around them. Well, the first hazard is:

SELFISHNESS. Consider your own happiness instead of your husband's. Putting your own pleasures and tastes and desires before him. Expecting him to do all the giving while you do all the taking. Forgetting that in love the happiest are those who love the most.

JEALOUSY. That is poisonous in marriage. It kills everything that is sweet and wholesome and right between a husband and wife, and this is true whether the wife is green-eyed over her husband's long-haired secretary, or his mother, or his business. Nothing disgusts a decent man so much as for his wife to believe that he is such a cat that he cannot speak to a woman without starting an affair with her.

BOSSINESS. Don't expect your self who-must-be-obeyed. No man marries a woman to get somebody to run him and tell him just where he gets off, and to correct his grammar and pronunciation and tell him what he shall eat.

INLAWS. Never go live with your in-laws or have them live with you. Living near, seeing what it will do, taking care of it and later making up his own mind how to get the most pleasure and profit out of it. No one can do this for him.

Myrtle Meyer Eldred's leaflet No. 18, "Allowances for Children," may be had by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of The Edmonton Bulletin.

husband's nose out of joint. It is bad business, because in a few years the children will grow up and leave you and if you have mislaid your husband by the way you are doomed to a lonely old age.

SLUMPING. Keep cutting Laid. Don't think because you are married that you can get sloppy and eat oysters. There is no place between the altar and the grave where a wife can sit down and say to herself that she has her husband safe in the bag. Fascinating a man isn't a job you can do once and get it over with. You have to repeat it every day.

INDIFFERENCE. The greatest danger of all in marriage is for a wife to cease to see in her husband the person with whom she is married for her not to show any interest in him as a man, for her to forget that he craves affection, appreciation and praise and wants to be loved and jolled and thanked for all that he does for his family.

Just as long as you think your husband is the most wonderful man in the world and tell him so, you have solved the problem of how to be happy through married.

British Dentistry To Be Nationalized

By Arthur Austin, director of the British Army dental service, said Monday that Britain is going to try to give her people nationalized dental service with 10,000 to 12,000 dentists when she needs 30,000 to 40,000 of them.

Longer Skirts
In Fall Styles

By PRESTON GROVER
PARIS, Aug. 5.—(AP)—The first of Paris' showing of fall styles today, rates that dresses are going to be longer, heavier, broader, and that much attention will be paid to the part of a dress you notice as you come along behind a pretty woman going down the street.

The first opening last night was by Jean Dessas, a round-faced little Egyptian-born Greek, who draped bits of the Orient into her new fashions and brought some rather worn comments from some of the professionals who attend such shows. He has not been named heretofore as among the most important stylists in Paris, although he is reported to be the principal builder of clothes for the Egyptian royal household. Today some thought he had got into the big leagues.

Dresses used a lot of black, wool, satin and silk jersey. He did much draping that swung the center of the gravity down to fairly low level and even below. He emphasized lavishly a soft, centrifugal drape in the Orient, of pulling the bottom down upward and inward like the draw string of an inverted purse. This gave his designs a peculiar fullness below the hip line which French couturiers called the "chapel shape."

Except for some of his formal evening gowns, there was little variation in length. Dresses and some of the coats reached half way down the calf of the leg.

As to the diameter of his designs, he was absolutely reckless. On one of his dresses he put pockets at hip level in front which extended busily downward to the mid-thigh on a jet plane. It made the waist look almost as narrow as your wrist.

His main attention was to the hips. The little black short-skirted suit had a dozen pleats down the center of the skirt, which extended down to the ankle. Cocktail gowns, some were built out madly in all directions and some evening gowns, again skirt length, had a double bustle. To a certain style, a double bustle would think of calling them bustle, but they were bustles.

Testing Newest Life Raft Invention

Eleven rafts with 45 men aboard set out on the rough waters of Lake Michigan for an estimated 62-mile trip to Ludington, Mich., to test the durability of recently developed 20-men life rafts and other sea survival equipment. The rubber craft are powered by outboard motors. U.S. army men are shown launching the craft which is called the "Covered Wagon" because of its rubber superstructure.

Manitoba Minister Reports

Big Industrial Gains in West

WINNIPEG (CP)—Western industrialists used to considering western Canada as a reservoir for raw materials for the factories of Ontario and Quebec, but now they are turning to the west for more. Says the Minister of Industry, J. B. McLaughlin, of Manitoba: "The west is coming into its own as an industrial area."

Mr. McLaughlin's outline of the west's industrial expansion was reported in a report on the west's economic development in the west's own province during the last 10 years, but the same picture, in greater detail, is being painted in Saskatchewan, Alberta or British Columbia.

More balanced economy has meant gains in farming. In western Manitoba's agriculture production value was estimated at $124,760,000 in 1959. The value of the fields was grain raised, stock raising, and farming and poultry raising.

Industrial Value

Industrial and cultural output, however, value of industrial production the same year was listed at $124,760,000 higher, the value $370,000,000.

Among urban industries, clothing and footwear, and furniture, are steadily towards the figure a year. Manitoba's supplies approximately 10 per cent of the the province's three cities—Winnipeg, Brandon and Portage la Prairie—have been the main economic sections, close to the source of raw materials.

Woodworkers, stonecutters, millers and weavers and a host of other skilled artisans were cited as having helped to develop the rural industries now flourishing.

Not Yet Independent

Expansion of trade, not yet reached a point where the west is fully independent of eastern producers for most of the stable goods it needs for its daily life. But Mr. McDermid quoted eastern financial experts as saying that the west is now on the way to the industrial progress made during its current rate of expansion that province hovers within a few years of being able to produce everything it needs on a market which would be around $100,000,000.

Textile and paper mills at Portage, Pailin, which last year produced 20,261 tons of newsprint, is producing 25,000 tons and is planning to add a self millinery is turning out over approximately 70 tons of suit fabric.

A sugar beet company on the Red River valley is producing 17,000 tons of beets last year, more than 15,000 tons of sugar last year.

Manitoba canneries last year shipped packed 125 tons of sweet corn for export. The province's 1930 crop were canned, 222 tons.

U.S. Firms Are Planning Import Middle East Oil

The Middle East oil must be transported entirely by water from the head of the Persian Gulf. Although the Strait of Hormuz is laying a 1,000-mile pipeline from the oilfields to the eastern Mediterranean coast that is not yet under construction, it is not the largest staple. The cost of construction will be about $100,000,000.

Oil Plan Imports

It has been reported that the U.S. will import 100,000 barrels of Persian Gulf oil daily by the Persian government.

The distance to the Atlantic seaboard from the Persian Gulf is about 8,000 miles. It is estimated that the cost of shipping 100,000 barrels of oil imported oil will be about $300 a barrel, which will be an average of $3.00 a barrel.

There is an import duty of 10-15% on oil. There is also a tax on oil. There is a barrel on all foreign crude oil. The cost of shipping Persian Gulf oil to the Middle East crude has no tax. The cost of shipping Persian Gulf oil to the Middle East crude has no tax. There may be no profit on the transportation.

The exact source of supply of the Persian Gulf oil has not been revealed. It could be purchased from the Persian Gulf.

reporting trouble in producing oil in Saudi Arabia in partnership with the Standard Oil Company of California. The company has considered feasible. An official of that company has denied that Texas is planning to produce oil in Saudi Arabia east oil into this country. The Texas company is constructing a refinery in Saudi Arabia, but it is not yet when completed, might be used to refine imported oil. But the refinery will not be used for that purpose. The company has difficulty in obtaining necessary materials.

Neither Standard Oil nor the Vacuum Oil Company has any oil in the Persian gulf fields. What they would bring in now would have to be purchased from the market.

Standard Oil is producing oil from the Arabian-American Oil Company which produces in Saudi Arabia, or it could be produced in Saudi Arabia. The company which the Gulf Oil Corporation owns a 50 percent interest in.

The company is producing oil already on a large scale, but most of it comes from South America. In February, the company produced 1,000 barrels of crude petroleum and 2,500,000 barrels of products. Domestic production is 1,000,000 barrels. The company has a high record in excess of 5,000,000 barrels a day.

8 Carloads Of Wool Are Shipped East

Eight carloads of wool have been shipped to the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers' warehouse at Charlton Place, Ont., by the Alberta Provincial Co-operative Wool Growers, said Robert Shopland, secretary. He expects that the total will top the quarter-million pound mark. There being no guaranteed price, initial payments are lower this season.

Wool clip sent by members is lower in many cases but new shippers have pulled the volume toward the 10-carload handlings of last year and at least one more car will be sent, he said.
